A: The German in the article says "nichts Neues daraus", which literally means "nothing new comes out of it". So it can't be a direct translation because (obviously) the word "nichts" doesn't have exactly the same meaning in English. The literal translation of "daraus" would be "using that" or "in a nutshell", which would be "um die Sache herum und die Technik zur Umsetzung zu präsentieren und dann noch auf den Punkt zu kommen, was wir da machen wollen". Some context may help in finding the meaning you are looking for. Please add some if you can. Silencing of the insulin receptor gene in rat adipocytes. In this work we examined the effect of the acute down-regulation of insulin receptors on the specific content of the insulin receptor mRNA. The ability to control gene expression by the RNA interference approach was used to induce the reduction of insulin receptor gene transcription in IOT1/2 cells infected with retroviruses that express the short hairpin (shRNA) targeting the rat insulin receptor (IR). The efficiency of the reduced IR gene transcription was validated by the suppression of IR mRNA levels, the reduction of insulin-stimulated glucose transport and the inhibition of Akt/PKB phosphorylation. However, the lower expression of the IR mRNA did not affect the total surface expression of the receptor. The obtained results demonstrate that the down-regulation of the IR gene expression is accompanied by a selective reduction of the IR mRNA content. The obtained results also indicate that insulin-stimulated glucose transport remains unaffected, indicating that down-regulation of the insulin receptor gene in IOT1/2 cells causes a specific, but not global, reduction of the insulin receptor expression.
